Code of Ethics

A Pranic Healer must recognise responsibility not only to the client or patient, but also to the self, to the organisation and to society. The ETHICS AND STANDARDS OF CONDUCT for certified Pranic Healing Trainers and Healers refer to moral principles or practices that will conform in the practice of the art and science of Pranic Healing.

Competence, Compassion, Respect

A Pranic Healer shall be dedicated to providing competent Pranic Healing with compassion and respect for human dignity. It is the duty of the Pranic Healer to try his or her best to heal and alleviate the condition of his patients. One must practice compassion with wisdom.

Confidentiality

Utmost effort and care must be taken to protect the confidentiality of the patient. The patient should be able to make disclosure of relevant information to the Pranic Healer with the knowledge that the Pranic Healer will respect the confidential nature of the communication. Patient medical history, symptoms, treatment(s), results of the healing process and the like acquired during the healer, client relationship must not be disclosed unless consented to by the patient.

Proper Attitude and Respect for Grand Master Choa Kok Sui and the Integrity of the Pranic Healing System.

Non-Criticism

Pranic Healers and Pranic Healing Instructors are expected at all times to practice and maintain respect, propriety and decorum of conduct. This includes refraining from negative criticism of other healers and other healing modalities.

Non-Diagnostic

A Pranic Healer must not and should not make a medical diagnosis of a patient's condition. It is the patient's responsibility to provide relevant medical history, to the extent possible, including information relating to their present health.

Good Communication

Pranic Healers have recognised that the health and wellbeing of the patients depends upon good communication. Patients share with healers the responsibility for their own health and well-being. The patient has the responsibility to be truthful and express concerns clearly to their Pranic Healer. The Healer may withhold any information concerning the case of his or her patients to other senior healers if the disclosure of such information will or may cause embarrassment to the patient.

Fee for Service

The Pranic Healer is entitled to charge a reasonable rate for his or her healing services. He or she should avoid charging excessive fee that would unduly burden the patient. Under no circumstances should a healer turn away or neglect a patient due to poverty or inability of the patient to pay.

Proper Conduct

Under no circumstances should a Pranic Healer take sexual advantage of his or her patients.

Constructive Use of Power

Under no circumstances should the Healer misuse his or her power. Power or the ability to manipulate invisible subtle energies is neither good nor bad. Power is good when used constructively and bad when used for destruction. It becomes bad when there is evil intention and misapplication of power.
